Artists: Bev Bills, Jackie Pearce, Charmian Quintrell, Liz Steveson, Kaaren Temme, Yvonne Twining, Vikki Waller and Liz Yates

The exhibition title has encouraged each artist to use their expertise and passion for working with fibres and textiles, to create artworks that express a greater sense of freedom as restrictions wind down.

Artists have been experimenting with a variety of new ideas and techniques including machine embroidery, eco-dyeing silk fabric, leatherwork, collage, fabric painting and other styles. For those of you into textiles this is an impressive line-up of artists and an exhibition not to be missed.

JUNE 2022

HELLO

I hope this email finds you all well.

For those of you who have not been in yet to see the Kaurna- Still Here exhibition, I encourage you to do so. This is an important exhibition for several reasons....

Gallery M is the first gallery outside of the SA Museum to have this touring exhibition and it looks stunning.

Having an exhibition outside of the museum context and positioning the work inside an art gallery instead of a museum helps viewers to appreciate the art and creativity involved in the making of these objects. Seen in a new context the objects and the artist who create them can be celebrated for their high level of craft, skill, and innovation.

Reading the captions and associated descriptions you can appreciate the very personal experiences the artist have had in recreating these incredible cultural objects.

A special acknowledgement to Kathryn Hill and Rodney Pike for their skill and enthusiasm in getting this tricky exhibition looking so fantastic. From painting, walls to inventing new ways to exhibit things, their professionalism and enthusiasm did not falter. I would also like to acknowledge the tireless work of Graham Watts and Graham Sporn, who measure and levelled each work in the RHG exhibition with a precision unlikely to be matched.

Thank you also to the CoM and Elizabeth Sykora for doing all the work to get it here, along with SA Museum, and Guildhouse for giving us access to the beautiful photographs by Grant Hancock, and the SA Museum for sending over all the labels for the objects.

We also opened the RHG exhibition Snapshots from Life and have had a few of you visit over the past week or so..

Now that the restrictions are easing and we have returned to Friday night events, I look forward to seeing more of you (especially exhibiting artists) at these openings. Attending openings is an important part of exhibiting, it is a chance to network, show your appreciation to the staff and volunteers that put the show together on your behalf, and an opportunity to support and encourage other artists who exhibit.

It is also part of the expectation as exhibiting artists that you invite guests, and bring along family and friends. Besides all of that, its also fun!

The staff at Gallery M look forward to seeing you all at the upcoming exhibitions here over the next few months!

NEW MEMBER PROFILE

Lola Bezor - Joined May 2022

Lola Bezor is an Adelaide-based artist merging both her interior design and artistic flair to create abstract and contemporary works of art.

Guided by a deep need to express herself, she offers her own definition of beauty, combining colour, texture, and abstract mark-making to create unique works.

Driven by the creative process, each painting forges its own journey through many layers of texture or pattern until a unique piece of work emerges.

“ I believe painting is about the journey, the mishaps, and the constant learning along the way. What is exciting to me is that people who love my work bring something of themselves to the creative process, because it’s how they engage with their imagination when they investigate my painting that then completes the piece. “
